CONCEPT FOR RISE IN THE CITY

Lesotho is a small country and its capital city is expanding and increasing in population, my concept for this design is the African family and how it is connected. the African family is undergoing modernization and its transition into nuclear families. The living room is the central part which represents the parents and love that connects the parts of the house and the other rooms represents the rest of the family members .Due to the low income of the families of the capital city Maseru is also used as part of the design concept an open space living room and dinning room connected to the two bedrooms. The living room is separated from the kitchen by a solid and a curtain wall to create a feeling of sim privacy.
